The Day Democracy Died
by Mark W. Stephens

January 6, 2021
Washington D.C.

About a decade or so ago, I wrote a series of political quips in a nursery rhyme style that a lot of people seemed to enjoy. Some were funny, some were serious, some now seem to be a bit prophetic.

One of the quips I wrote was this:

"Khrushchev said, 'Without firing a shot.'
To elect more Democrats was a Communist plot."

What I was referring to is a series of quotes from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, who said the following around 1956:

"We will take America without firing a shot and we will bury you."

"We do not have to invade the United States, we will destroy you from within."

"We cannot expect Americans to jump from capitalism to communism, but we can assist their leaders in giving Americans small does of socialism until they suddenly awake to find they have communism."

What the world saw on January 6, 2021, was this exact plan carried to fruition. The death of democracy and the advent of mainstream communism in America.

When events of this "election" season are presented as a "vast voter fraud conspiracy that was perpetrated by individuals at not only every level of government but also including the judiciary and the media," it seems hard to swallow. That couldn't possibly happen, could it?

Well, it has certainly happened in the past.

If you know your history or really care to do the research, you will find that this exact "conspiracy theory" has been played out many times. Russia, Germany, China, North Korea, Cuba, and more recently Venezuela.

It's just that it never happened in America. And THAT is what makes this so hard to believe.

All conspiracies start with a theory until you suddenly realize you're smackdab in the middle of reality and the "conspiracy theory" was never just a "theory" at all.

When you step back and look at the bigger picture, including Nikita Khrushchev's bold declaration of taking over America "from within," infiltration of our education system over those 60 years, from Kindergarten through College, especially College, the slow infiltration of our political system and judiciary, the slow infiltration of our traditional media outlets, and the advanced permeation of our social media platforms, we have experienced the indoctrination and introduction of our citizens to communism, through small doses of socialism. To the point that lying, cheating, and stealing to obtain the political power required to force communism on Americans has not only become socially acceptable, but virtually obligatory without a second thought about right or wrong.

Those very individuals who now comprise every level of government, the judiciary, and the media, which once seemed so hard to believe would be involved in such a "vast conspiracy" have all been exposed to this same indoctrination that has occurred here for the past 60 years. And they are now in positions of power and can act on those instilled belief systems.

Considering all of this, it is not really so hard to believe anymore, is it? It does not seem like a "conspiracy theory" any longer. Just a true conspiracy.

Before Donald Trump was ever sworn into office, he threatened to expose Democrats and Republicans who were involved in deep state activity...or rather...communism. In return, they swore to remove him from office or destroy him in the process.

We spent four long years with him enduring false accusations, false impeachment proceedings, and threats of prosecution. They tried to destroy him and his family. They are still trying to destroy him and his family.

They began his presidency with illegitimate attempts to remove him from office and they will end his presidency with illegitimate attempts to remove him from office. And because he has vowed to run for office again in the future, they will not stop until they find some way to prosecute him. They will not stop there. They will try to remove him from office, even in his last two weeks as president, and/or prosecute anyone who supported him.

They will not allow themselves to be exposed again and they intend to make Trump and those who support him public examples to discourage future attempts to expose them and to ensure their stay in power. History tells us what is to come.

But this is what the Democrats (or should we just start calling them what they are: communists?) don't understand:

We the People are not President Trump. President Trump IS We the People.

President Trump is simply the embodiment of the American spirit. He any other president in our lifetime. He understands exactly who he represents, and for that, he will forever be favored by We the People. And that American spirit is what they will never defeat.

Imagine being prosecuted for "crimes" just because you have a different political opinion. We are at that point in America. It is happening. This is why they ushered in "social justice" to replace "criminal justice." Political prosecutions are a core element of social justice. Social justice is a core element of communism. There is no longer equal protection under the law, they're not even pretending anymore. And it will get worse.

I am reminded of another one of the political quips I wrote over a decade ago that seems appropriate here:

"Freedom of speech is a real gem but only if you agree with them."

In retrospect, looking at the folks who perpetrated this vast fraud on America over the past four years and their reasons for doing so, the importance of their winning this election by any means necessary becomes even more evident and the possibility of these same individuals who now "comprise every level of government, the judiciary, and the media," which once seemed so hard to believe would be involved in such a "vast conspiracy" suddenly seems much more straightforward and easy to believe.

All the same individuals or groups of individuals were involved in both sets of conspiracies, from politicians and all levels of government, to the judiciary, to the media.

The election fraud they engaged to keep President Trump from returning to office was just an extension of the attempted coup to fraudulently remove him from office. It is the same unlawful conspiracy they have perpetuated for the past four years.

I'm not going to comment here on the events that transpired at the United States Capitol building, and the shooting death of a young woman there because I do not know what those facts are. As always, I will wait for those facts. Understand that I stand with the police and if they had a valid reason to shoot, I will support them. And I will continue to stand with police until such time as law enforcement changes to the point that police officers become just a tool for Democrat oppression.

If you understand history and study socialist and communist governments of the past, you will understand that the rule of law and equal protection of the law has always fallen and become non-existent under these regimes. Law enforcement has become unrecognizable in terms of what we now know and love about law enforcement. But I have to roll my eyes when I see politicians rush to the media to

And it is nonsense.

For the past 4 years, we have watched riots, beatings, murders, and portions of our cities burn to the ground. These same people who now claim they "don't condone violence" spent those 4 years trying to convince us that this was not "violence" at all. They cried, "First Amendment!" and tried to persuade us all that these were just, "peaceful protests." They condoned the violence.

Joe Biden incited violence and justified it and condoned it by calling "antifa" an "idea" and not a violent domestic terrorist group. He praised their actions. Not once did he ever denounce them or their violence. Kamala Harris actually encouraged violence and violent protesters, justifying their actions as a "movement" and stated it should continue after the election...if she lost.

Now, they will try to impeach President Trump during his last two weeks in office falsely claiming he did what the world saw Joe Biden and Kamala Harris do. Just like they impeached President Trump for falsely claiming he did what we all saw Joe Biden do in the infamous quid pro quo video.

Starting to see the pattern?

These same people now want you to believe the world is coming to an end because conservatives are becoming the very "protesters" they have championed over the past four years. These same people who have ignored law and order for the past 4 years are now demanding the very law and order they despised and abandoned. Of course, as long as the rule of law is not used against them.

The fact is, we have all at one point or another, condoned violence. Simply maintaining law and order can, at times, be extremely violent. I have the scars to prove it.

We are a nation whose very foundation was built upon a wholly violent revolution, which was good and virtuous and most essential for the birth of our democracy.

So, it would seem a reasonable question to ask:

"If revolution to achieve our democracy was a good thing, how can revolution to maintain our democracy be a bad thing?"

In the same vein of questioning violence and law and order, another question comes to mind:

If, over the past 4 years, it has been established that certain politically weighted groups and individuals have been allowed to choose which laws they follow and which laws they break, without fear of prosecution, do we really have "law and order" in America any longer or has the criminal justice system been reduced to a means of political control...much in the same way it is used in communist countries?

violence? I don't know. I hope not. But if you were to ask me if maintaining our democracy is important enough to fight for, even if that includes violence...my answer would be...absolutely. It was worth it to achieve our democracy and it is worth it to maintain our democracy.

On January 6, 2021, I traveled to Washington D.C. for what I believed would be a historic event. My purpose was to meet with Congressmen and discuss election fraud.

I was there as President Trump spoke to the masses who assembled there. I was there as the crowd marched peacefully to the Capitol building. I was there to witness antifa-types pretending to be Trump supporters. One particular group, comprised of twenty-something-year-olds, was sitting under a tree smoking dope. They were dressed in Trump clothing, but when I walked their conversation included profane phrases such as "F Trump." In my profession, that would be something we call...a clue. They were not Trump supporters at all, just dressed as such no doubt to incite and influence the crowd. There were other more obvious antifa types in the crowd and what appeared to be members of BLM present.

However, the vast majority were simply America loving patriots of all ages, including grand-parents and families with children.

Regardless of what is being reported in the media, the overwhelming majority of the crowd was passive and nonviolent.

I was there for part of President Trump's speech, and I can tell you that at no time did I hear him "incite" any violence. This can be evidenced by watching the crowd leave the area after he gave the speech and calmly walk toward the Capitol building. If he had incited violence, they would have immediately run from that area and rushed the Capitol. That's just human nature. That is not what happened. We were on the Capitol grounds for quite a while before there was any hint of unrest.

As we were on the Capitol grounds, word spread throughout the crowd that "Republicans had turned on President Trump, including Vice President Pence," who supposedly claimed there was no provision in the Constitution for correcting election fraud and that his role as Vice President had no authority in this matter, but was strictly "ceremonial." Cell phone service was sparse as it seemed they were intermittently blocking service, but word spread quickly among the crowd that the election had been stolen and very few Republicans were standing to fight for the American people.

And THAT was the first hint of unrest among the crowd.

Since I was asked to help with the security and protection of the group I was with, I worked with off-duty SWAT officers who were there with semi-automatic fire of pepper ball guns. We made eye contact and we acted immediately to move our group out of the area, knowing what would come next. As expected, we heard the echoing boom of flashbangs as we moved them away. We smelled the teargas as we looked behind us and saw the smoke drift through the crowd.

We walked several blocks and then we were out of the area and had our group in a safe place until our transportation arrived. What happened after that, I do not know. What I do know is that I personally saw no violence and heard no talk from the crowd planning any type of violence.

If there is anyone to "blame" for "inciting" that unrest, then place the blame where it belongs. For four years, Democrats have been urging people to riot if they don't get their way. They have urged people to break the law if they don't get their way. Cities were burned. Businesses and homes were destroyed. And they protected those who followed their incitement from prosecution.

Why should this crowd be expected to behave any differently?

I fear that this is not the end of violence, but the beginning.

Communism depends on chaos. Chaos breeds violence.

In the end, what I saw...what I was there to witness...was just as I predicted...

A historic event.

The sheer mass of people was amazing. Their voices ringing in unity was powerful. Their words could be heard precisely from blocks away. The thunderous roars of their cheers for the President are unforgettable.

While my purpose for being there, which was to meet with Congressmen and discuss election fraud, never occurred because of events, I was proud to be there nonetheless. I was proud to stand for what is right. I was proud for my voice to be heard for the millions of others who could not be there.

I have since come to understand it may well be one of the last times for a while that conservatives can meet freely to protest the communist takeover of America.

I fully expect censorship to begin immediately, first with the banning of President Trump from social media, followed by the banning of conservative leadership, followed by the banning of any conservative voice on social media.

Censorship is what communists do.

They cannot allow the free-flowing of information and ideas. They must control what is said and what is thought. They must destroy

While I was there to witness a historic event...what I did not fully understand at the time was that the historic event I would witness would be the ushering in of mainstream communism in America.

The historic event I witnessed was...

My first thought is...what do we do now? If we do not stand up and fight for our 1st amendment right of free speech and the right to assemble now...they will come for our 2nd amendment next.
